

Dr Sarah Hopkins is a British Geriatrics Society and The Dunhill Medical Trust Doctoral Clinical Fellow and a Specialty Registrar in Geriatric and General Internal Medicine. Her research centres around improving care for older frailer people, their families and informal carers.

Sarah completed her medical degree at the University of Cambridge, and subsequently an Academic Foundation Programme in Geriatric and Stroke Medicine (Brighton and Sussex Medical School) and Core Medical Training in Oxford.

Sarah was appointed Chief Resident at Hinchingsbrooke Hospital (2016-17), CLAHRC Fellow in 2017, and Addenbrooke's Charitable Trust Cambridge Clinical Research Fellow in 2018. As well as her clinical and research roles, she is actively involved in undergraduate teaching, acting as a facilitator on the Clinical Ethics and Law, and Palliative Care courses for the University of Cambridge Clinical School, and is an Associate Fellow of the Higher Education Academy.